Alan Partridge Nomad

Alan Partridge's 'Nomad' is a fine piece of travel writing. This picaresque, Sebald-esque even, yarn concerns Partridge's recreation, by foot, of an epic journey his father once took (or did he), from Norwich to Dungeness Power Station, for a job interview. Partridge's walk is a long march into his own soul,...

In Alan Partridge: Nomad, Alan dons his boots, windcheater and scarf and embarks on an odyssey through a place he once knew - it's called Britain - intent on completing a journey of immense personal significance. Diarising his ramble in the form of a 'journey journal', Alan details the people and places he encounters, ruminates on matters large and small and, on a final leg fraught with danger, becomes - not a man (because he was one to start off with) - but a better, more inspiring example ...

described on the blurb as 'the beautifully punctuated follow-up to the author's 2012 memoir I, Partridge'. In Nomad, Partridge is on a mission to walk 160 miles from his childhood home in Norwich (a fine city) to recreate a journey in The Footsteps of his Father TM. Here's Partridge's stab at the original logo for the walk.

In nomad Alan talks about pat farell and his taking of hostages in alpha papa. But as I understood from the trailers, alpha papa was a film made by Alan partridge as opposed to the whole pat farell thing actually happening. As in Steve coogan acting as Alan partridge acting as Alan partridge, if you know what I mean.
